

I benefit from paying for Satellite radio over free radio because of the quality of service and useful content. I have the local traffic and weather channels preset on my unit in the car. These channels are consistent information with little interruptive chatter and offer incredible details of traffic problems. With so many free radio stations selling the shock jock garbage, my satellite radio is a breath of fresh air. I understand that advertising dollars are in the best interest of the government and private sector but I believe that if I pay a company like XM to provide me advertisement free traffic and weather reports, that the government should respectfully allow XM the freedom to do so. If for any other reason - to help eliminate traffic jams! Please reject NAB's petition 04-160.

Thank you,
Peter Martin
